

Facts about Moving companies

If you are moving to your new home or to a new office then it is very important to find good moving companies. There are actually thousands of moving companies you can choose from but you would want to select from reputable ones if you do not want your move to be expensive and taxing. When you move remember that you have to move with a company you can trust because you are moving your valued possessions. There are actually fly by night moving companies and these are the ones you really have to stay away from. However, do not worry. As there are moving companies that do nothing but scam their customers, there are also many which provide excellent service and fair rates. So what should you do in order to find the right moving companies?

Well doing a little research is the first thing that you should do. By checking out the internet and your local listings, see if you can find professional moving companies. In your research, check the ratings of the moving companies and also the feedback from customers. Also, it is better if the moving companies have long track record. This means that they have been in service long enough to satisfy customers. Now from your research, select at least five moving companies. Getting their DOT and MC license number, local and toll free numbers and company address is also important. Any dubious information is already a sign that they are not to be trusted. And also important in your research, ask for references and contact them. Now choose the best five moving companies from your list and forget about their rates at this time.

Second, call the moving companies and ask how they are going to go about estimates. Inquire them if they do in home estimate. Then ask if they will do the move or if they subcontract the job. You should think twice about safety of your things and the reliability of their services if they depend on subcontracting. It is better for you to find moving companies that do the moving themselves. Now if they have local office, you should check it out so you can see their storage facilities and their trucks. You can then fairly assess the company with the safety of their storage facilities and the quality of their trucks. For example, moving companies that do not have permanent company name and logo on their trucks is certainly what you do not want. Comparing the quotes from the different moving companies is your third step. Some moving companies will have higher rates than others because of the services they offer. So check the other services, such as the amount insured and the valuation of your things. Do not just look at the total amount of what the move will cost you. These can make a difference not in your budget but in the overall security and safety of your belongings. Do not be enticed by moving companies that offer unreasonably cheap rate even though moving is really quite expensive. Unreasonably cheap rate is one indication that they are not your typical professional movers.

Finally choose the one that you think is best among your five moving companies. Now once you have chosen the one you think is the best, call the Federal Motor Carrier Safety Administration and inquire about how the company is faring in terms of complaints. Given good feedback, you can now hire this moving company. See more Moving cross country -- Long distance movers -- Cross country moving companies -- Moving companies --

About the Author

Read more about long distance move, read crosscountrymovingcompanies.net.

Source: <http://LearnTorre.com>